

FELINE LEUKEMIA (FELV) is a deadly virus that is transmitted through saliva or blood (mother to kitten). Leukemia attacks the immune system, allowing the cat to be more susceptible to disease and cancer. After the initial series of 2-3 (depending on age and maternal protection) a yearly vaccination protects your cat.